What is the verified rights owner program?

The Verified Rights Owner (VeRO) program allows owners of intellectual property (IP) rights and their authorized representatives to report eBay listings that may infringe on those rights. VeRO embodies our commitment to provide a safe place to buy and sell, which respects property owners' rights.

VeRO participant profiles

VeRO participant profiles

If you are a Verified Rights Owner, you may create a profile page which allows you to share information about your intellectual property rights with the eBay community.

For example, you can provide information about

- A list of your intellectual property, including brands, trademarks, and copyrights.
- The potential consequences of infringing on a company's IP rights.
- The conditions under which products bearing your IP may be sold.
- How to contact you with questions or concerns.
- Other frequently asked questions.

If you would like eBay to post a free VeRO participant profile page for you, contact vero@ebay.com for more information start this process.

These pages listed below give information about the brands' products and legal positions. The rights owners are solely responsible for the content. Please contact rights owners directly if you have questions. This list of brands is not comprehensive of brands with IP rights nor is this a complete list of all Rights Owners currently participating in the VeRO program.

Trademark infringement

A trademark is a unique sign (such as a name, word, phrase, logo, or symbol) that a company uses to identify its products or services. For example, eBay is the name of our company, but it's also a trademark used on our site and on various eBay products. Trademark laws are primarily designed to protect consumers from confusing one company's goods or services with those of another.

Replica and counterfeit

It's illegal to sell counterfeits, fakes, or replicas of brand-name items. We don't allow these items to be sold on eBay.

Example

• Items that weren't made by the manufacturer but the items are labeled with the brand, like a purse that has a Burberry label on it but wasn't made by Burberry.

Brand name misuse

You may not use brand names in your listing if the product isn't manufactured by or compatible with that brand. You may use "compatible with," "fits," or "for" before a brand name if the item you are describing is specifically designed to be compatible with the products of that brand.

Examples

- A generic case made for an iPhone uses the brand name "Apple".
- Listing an adidas shoe and adding the brand name "Nike".

Logo misuse

If you include logos in your listing descriptions, make sure you're authorized to use them. Using someone's logo without permission is a violation of trademark laws and can be misleading for buyers. Creating a logo that's similar to someone else's can also be a trademark infringement.

Example

• Listing a branded item and including logos in your description or images without authorization.

Warranty

Listings that contain a misrepresentation regarding an item's warranty are in violation of trademark laws. Information relating to the warranty of a product is considered material information and should never be misrepresented. You should read the warranty or contact the manufacturer to be sure that the warranty is eligible for a buyer before mentioning it in a listing.

Example

• Listing a product and including information about the manufacturer's warranty without checking to see if it covers resale of the product.

Copyright infringements

A copyright is the legal protection given to authors of creative works such as movies, music, software, photographs, and books, both published and unpublished. Copyright protection prevents others from using the work without permission.

Image and text

Using someone else's image or description without permission could violate copyright laws. If you use text or an image that was created by someone else be sure that you have permission to use the text or image.

Examples

- Images or text copied from other websites or internet searches.
- Stock photos and text used without permission.
- Scans or text copied from catalogs or advertisements.

Media, software, movies, paintings

Selling unauthorized copies of media, software, movies, or paintings violates copyright laws. Unauthorized copies include but aren't limited to backup, pirated, duplicated, or bootlegged copies. Copyright protection prevents others from using creative works without permission. It may also limit the right to distribute the copyrighted product.

Examples

- Burning unauthorized copies of movies or music and selling the copies.
- Opened software subject to licensing agreements.
- CD-Rs or DVD-Rs that include multiple copies of books or images.

Design right (Europe, Asia, Australia, and New Zealand only)

Design right applies to the way something looks, the shape and configuration of a product, but not its functionality. Design rights protect designs from being copied and used by someone else.

Example

• The shape and material used to create a designer sofa is copied and used to create an imitation or lookalike.

Patent rights (Europe)

A patent is a specific set of rights granted to inventors, giving them the right to exclude others from making, using, and selling their invention. Patents are registered with each region's patent and trademark office.

Parallel imports

Some products are intended for sale in a specific market or country. The sale of these products into another country or market could violate trademark or copyright laws. We strongly encourage our members to educate themselves about the laws of their own country, as well as the countries where they plan to do business.

Example

• Product intended for sale only in the United States is listed for sale to buyers in Europe.
